

Peas, Trees and 1.5 Degrees

Nature and agriculture in the Climate Decade

Eating is an agricultural act – Wendell Berry, Writer, Farmer and Environmental Activist, 1990

This perspective has only become more critical as we enter the Climate Decade. The act of eating connects agriculture, nature, climate change, water, and other systems. This is our last chance to curb global emissions, halt biodiversity loss and prevent the sixth mass extinction.

Increasing demands on agricultural systems are affecting global food supplies and damaging ecosystems. In response, governments, businesses and farmers around the world are counteracting through policy, innovation and practice to protect nature, boost yields and capture carbon. Join governors, business leaders, farmer representatives and NGOs as we discuss the solutions, remaining challenges and regenerative potential of transforming our food systems – or the act of eating – from emissions sources to emissions sinks.

10.30am - 11.30am EDT - Thursday, September 23, 2021

Welcome

- Tim Ash Vie, Director, Under2 Coalition Secretariat, Climate Group

Sources to sinks: Global innovation and policy in agriculture, forestry and land use

- Ashley Allen, CSO, Oatly
- Jim Andrew, CSO, PepsiCo
- Mudit Kumar Singh, Former Head of Forest Force, State Government of Chhattisgarh, India
- Moderator – Dr Divya Sharma, Executive Director, India, Climate Group

Farmside chat: In-the-field knowledge on farming and food

- Precious Phiri, African Coordinator, Regeneration International
- Dr Zitouni Ould-Dada, Deputy Director, Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO)

Perspectiva latina: Latin American action on agriculture, forestry and land use

Spanish-Portuguese language panel – Panel en español e português

- Dr Luis Guillermo Hidalgo Okimura, Governor, Regional Government of Madre de Dios, Peru
- Jaime Guevara, Governor – Prefect, Provincial Government of Pastaza, Ecuador
- Carolina Genin, Climate Director, WRI Brasil
- Moderator – Kurt Holle, Director, Peru, WWF

Close remarks

- Tim Ash Vie, Director, Under2 Coalition Secretariat, Climate Group

**This is a multilingual event; subtitles will be provided.*